challenges faced by schools. Now, I hope to one day contribute to the realization of a society where each child can experience the joy of learning and can grow by continuing to learn, even after they have finished school and in the years that follow. I would like to apply what I felt and thought through my recent visit to MeySen Kindergarten in my daily work so that I can make use of it in the future.

New Building Construction Begins at Maruyama Campus

It has been two years since the completion of the Friends Square at the Maruyama campus, and in 2022, MeySen began phase 2 of its construction plan. The initial plan was to build the new structure as part of the Friends Square, but the plans were adjusted for construction of a separate facility in order to improve stability against earthquakes. Work is already underway and is scheduled to be completed in 2023.

In recent years the number of students using MeySen's Daycare program has increased at both campuses, and MeySen has made effort to both strengthen the faculty and create more space for students. This has been difficult, especially at Maruyama, where of the five classrooms being used for Daycare in the Autumn Building, three have to be free by 5:00PM for use by Friends Club EX classes.

With the completion of this new building, the child care environment at Maruyama Daycare is expected to improve greatly. The new building will have six classrooms, a multi-purpose room, and a Daycare faculty office, and students will be able to move between rooms on rainy days without getting wet. The faculty, admin, and child care teachers offices are all within easy reach of each other, making communication between departments much more efficient. In addition to Daycare, a variety of other uses are being planned for the building. Construction for Maruyama's new building is finally underway!

A big home
where young children can come and feel as safe as they would at their own — it is a concept that we hold dear in all of MeySen's design and construction.

Message from an Alumnus

Two years ago when I was accepted into the Ministry of Education, Culture, Sports, Science and Technology (MEXT), and I was considering further studies in early childhood education, I was given the opportunity to visit MeySen. I observed a typical day at MeySen. The students practiced for sports day and the Christmas performance, grabbed me by the hand and pulled me to go down the jumbo slide and climb on tree stumps, and even coerced me into joining them during their class time as well. I saw both the English and Japanese teachers put a lot of effort into helping the children adopt good patterns of behavior in a way that was very natural. For example, the students, on their own without a teacher telling them to, lined up with a rhythmic chant of "ton ton pi," helped each other whenever one of them was struggling, and stayed inside the white boundary line marking their play area. I was impressed with how the teachers worked hard to make each and every day meaningful and creative. They encouraged the students to think for themselves and take initiative rather than simply following instructions, and were aware of the individual preferences and personality of each student. It was an opportunity for me to realize once again that all of the fun I had experienced at MeySen growing up was made possible because of this kind of support.

I entered MEXT last April, and my current work involves preserving cultural assets in the Cultural Properties Division of the Agency for Cultural Affairs. As of last December, I am also working with the Cabinet Secretariat's Future of Education Creation Council.

What led me to my current job was my study of philosophy at graduate school, where I learned the depth and joy of learning, and it gave me a desire to see things that are important and yet not visible to the eye, like the concepts of philosophy, brought to reality in the social system. Through my educational training, I also saw the appeal of the role of a teacher and the MeySen Maruyama Kindergarten has started its 56th year. MeySen Takamori Kindergarten opened eleven years after, making this its 45th year.

Looking back at the history of MeySen Academy, it may seem like it was smooth sailing at times. However, each phase has had its challenges and hardships. During my own time as principal, we experienced the Great East Japan Earthquake eleven years ago, and the Covid crisis for the last two years. Each year has had its own challenges, some of which made us very concerned.

I am sure that you have had to fight some anxious and fearful moments during the pandemic in the last two years. Each of us faces struggles and sadness, worries and anxiety. We face moments where we do not know who to turn to, or where to ask for help.

There is one thing I would very much like you to know, especially in this difficult time. That is this, no matter what situation you are facing, it is possible to have peace in your heart—even in the midst of a storm. The Bible gives us the answer.

The Bible is our Guide and Source of Comfort

Since its founding over half a century ago, the foundation, guideline, and heart of MeySen Academy has been the Bible. The Bible is our standard for teaching our students right and wrong, and when faced with difficult decisions, we have prayed to God in heaven and sought answers in the Bible, the word of God.

Your word is a lamp to my feet and a light to my path. (Psalm 119:105)

The words of the Bible are also our source of comfort and peace in our hearts in times of trouble and hardship. This is based on placing our absolute and complete trust in God. The true, living God who is the creator of all things knows our past, present, and future all the way into eternity, and is moving all things in his perfect plan. Even those events that make us ask, "Why," do not happen without God's knowledge and permission. Political situations, the rise and fall of nations and peoples, are all under God's control.

Each day of our lives is in God's plan. God loved even weak and sinful people like us so much that he sent his only son, Jesus Christ, to save us from eternal destruction. Jesus sacrificed himself, died for our sins, and on the third day he was raised, in the flesh, back to life. Through his death and resurrection, we can all receive forgiveness of sins, true peace, and the hope that comes from the promise of eternal life.

The Peace "which Surpasses All Understanding"

When we believe in the God who loves us that much, surrender our lives to Him, and choose to trust Him 100%, we can have peace in our hearts and hope in any situation. There is a verse that I often think about when faced with difficulties or hardships.

Do not be anxious about anything, but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known to God. And the peace of God, which surpasses all understanding, will guard your hearts and your minds in Christ Jesus. (Philippians 4:6-7)

We tend to fall into fear and anxiety very easily, but there are always things we can thank God for regardless of the circumstance we are facing. While we offer him our thanks we can also tell him our requests and desires. God allows challenges to come at us for his purposes. They may turn our hearts toward him, and they may keep us humble. Even when we don't understand why, we can yield it all to him with thanksgiving, and we will experience that peace that "surpasses all understanding."

Happiness for the Children,
Hope for the Future

I always tell the students that when we become children of God, we receive heaven and eternal life, and even when our life on this earth comes to an end, we will be given a new body and enter God's kingdom, heaven. In that place there is no sin or strife, no sickness or hardship, no death, but we receive life and joy forever.

Our life on this earth is about 100 years at the most, and we do not know when it will end. It is shorter than the blink of an eye in comparison to heaven. When we receive forgiveness of sins and eternal life, it makes the worries and struggles we experience on this earth seem small.

Aspirations for the New Year

For young children, the experience of each day has a tremendous impact on their life. It wouldn't be exaggerating to say that one month in a young child's life is the equivalent of one year as an adult. Although the effects of Covid are expected to continue, we will make every effort to prevent the spread of infection at MeySen and provide the students with a normal education experience and as many events as possible in the new school year.

Children are precious lives given by God, more precious than anything else in the world. In order to live up to the expectations of those who trust MeySen Academy and that have entrusted us with their most valuable treasures, all of our teachers and staff will continue to love each and every child with all our hearts and strive to provide the best education possible this school year. I would like to thank you all for your understanding and cooperation, and ask for your continued understanding and support.

I hope that I can help the children feel happy and at ease while they are waiting for their parents to pick them up. I will do my best to always keep a smile on my face.

My daughter had a wonderful experience during her three years in Daycare. Now I am the one who can support the children and their parents, and with the support of my fellow teachers I hope to create a fun Daycare environment.

Why are students at MeySen given English Names?

In the fall of 2000, there was an article about English names in the "Cookie Wire," a newsletter that was created by a class mothers group. It is interesting that these class mothers interviewed the principal (*1) at the time and distributed it to the other parents.

- Every student is given an English name to be used by their teachers during English classes. Some may ask, "why not just use their real name," or wonder, "will this be confusing for my child?" This topic came up recently during a class mothers' meeting, and we asked the principal for a comment.

Principal: Children at this age can easily remember two or three names. They simply accept it as is, and are rarely confused.

There are several reasons why we assign each of our students an English name:

- The English names that we pick for the students at MeySen are all old, historical names, and by learning each name they are adding to their vocabulary. They are also practicing their pronunciation when they use these names. (*2)
- It is a lot of work for the American teachers to learn all the Japanese names, which they

- often are not able to pronounce correctly.
- When a Japanese name is inserted into an English sentence, the English rhythm gets lost. Children enjoy having more names, and they even feel proud of it. It also helps to naturally cultivate an international way of thinking.

When you go on the America Study Trip, the local staff will be able to remember your English name right away, and it will also make getting to know new friends much easier. You will be using your English name for a long time during your time at MeySen, so enjoy it.

(*1) The principal at the time of this interview was Philip Briman, who now serves as Honorary Chairman of the Board. Pictured on the front page is the very popular MeySen mascot Cookie, an Old English Sheepdog who lives on campus.

(*2) MeySen is currently updating its name list, removing names that are too old and including names that are currently popular in America as baby names such as "Charlotte" and "Levi."

Friends Club 3rd Grader Wins Again! Ota Nakazawa wins first prize at the National Abacus Competition for "2nd Grade and Under" division.

At the end of last year, Maruyama Friends Club Third Grade student Ota Nakazawa (Jay) entered the National Abacus Competition, where he placed first in all of Japan in the individual all-around and mental arithmetic proficiency categories in the "2nd Grade and Under" division.

In the Friends Newsletter Summer 2020 edition, we featured his amazing achievement of being the youngest person ever to pass Level 10 of the Mental Arithmetic Exam, and this is yet another remarkable accomplishment.

In this year's competition there was also a division for English Oral Calculation*, in which Ota took fourth place. "He was able to understand words such as billion and million that he had never heard before, and he completed the calculations on the abacus without having to mentally translate words into Japanese. I am so impressed with his grasp of English," his mother commented.

It is such an encouragement to our English teaching staff to hear examples of how the English that students have acquired through fun and learning since kindergarten is affecting areas of study not necessarily related to English in such a positive way. We look forward to seeing what else Ota will do.

*English Oral Calculation: Contestants listen to numbers read out loud by a native English speaker and then perform the calculation on their abacus. This requires an understanding of English vocabulary for units such as "hundred" and "million." For those who are interested there are videos featuring these kind of competitions on YouTube.

Last November, four students from Takamori Premier G2 won the top award at the Miyagi Prefectural Programming Competition for Elementary Students, and went on to compete in the national competition in 2021.

Out of the 388 groups competing in the prefectural competition, only 37 were allowed to go on to the nationals. Mio Nakamura (Denise), who was the youngest contestant, Sorato Kagawa (Dale), Suzuka Nozaki (Carol), and Kazutoyo Saito (Daniel) spent two months creating and programming "AI Robot Bakery" and presented it online. Their entry received high scores for both the idea and the presentation quality, and was awarded the Everyone's Future Award.

You can view information about the national competition here (Japanese only).

From Ms. Katie,
Maruyama Premier Head Teacher

We are so proud of you!

Maruyama Premier Student Wins at English Competition

Maruyama Premier G3 student Yuma Nakamura (Tom) took the "grand prize" (which in this competition was the second highest prize), at the 32nd Kid's English Competition (a national competition). This competition is held annually with the purpose of giving children who are learning English an opportunity to show the results of their hard work and to encourage their further motivation for study. Mr. Nakamura entered the English Recitation category for younger grades, reciting a two-minute piece called "Gloria," and passed the first stage. At the national competition held on March 20 in Kyoto, he presented his piece as one of 100 children who had been selected. Being graded on the criteria of pronunciation, intonation, and expression, Yuma demonstrated the English ability he acquired at Premier School. Congratulations!

Spring is here!

The 2022 school year has started with new students entering Kindergarten. This year is sure to have fun times as well as moments we will need to press through, but, "Every day is a new day!" Let's enjoy each day with our friends and teachers, laughing and cheering each other on.

Every day at Premier School Kindergarten, students have a 40-minute Japanese activity time where they experience a variety of activities related to Japanese culture, such as singing seasonal folk songs, learning about traditional events, or reading haiku poetry. As well as utilizing MeySen's original picture books to study vocabulary, K4 students learn Japanese proverbs such as, "A journey of a thou-
